General News.

The freightage of a majority of the railroad lines in the United States are now in session in New York. The object of the Convention is to adopt a uniform freight tariff for the roads now represented.

No new cases of cholera were reported on Thursday in New York. There were several sudden deaths reported, but as the inspectors did not see the patients until after death they were unwilling to pronounce decidedly upon the disease.

It is said that Mr. O. H. Browning will be made Secretary of the Interior.

The expense incurred by Canada, in consequence of the Fenian invasion, up to this time, may be estimated at a sum not far short of $2-500,000, and that sum will be largely increased before the matter subsides into quietude.

Fenian Prisoners Charged with Invasion and Treason—Confederates—Upper and Lower Canada to have Different and Separate Forms of Government—The Voice of the People Disregarded—Military Disposition.

Correspondence of the New York Tribune.

Toronto, June 25, 1866.

The opinion in well informed quarters seems to be that the Fenian prisoners will be divided into two classes. Foreigners and British subjects; that the former will be tried by court-martial as invaders of Canadian soil, and the latter by civil tribunals for high treason. It is not probable that many of them will be executed. The difficulty will be to pick out some for an example as more guilty than the rest. As there are no leaders among them, the only question appears to be whether those who are British subjects are more guilty than foreigners. In point of law there is no difference, but in the popular imagination there is. There is a disposition to regard the British subject as the more guilty. As time rolls on the heat of popular passion has a tendency to cool, and the desire for victims becomes less strong.

In spite of the desire for expedition, it is doubtful whether consideration can be finally deferred beyond the present session of the Imperial Parliament. In the mean time, a measure containing the provisions of the recent constitutions of Upper and Lower Canada is about to be introduced into the Legislature. At first it was thought essential that all the local Legislatures of the several Provinces should be ratiified on the common model. But now this idea has been discarded, and Upper and Lower Canada are to have local constitutions framed on totally different principles. Lower Canada is to have two Legislative Chambers, Upper Canada only one. Lower Canada is to have a parliamentary or responsible Government, Upper Canada is to have a Government framed upon the model of those of the several States of the American Union. The Upper House, so-called, of the Lower Canada Legislature is to be nominated by the Crown, for life, as a means of protecting the English-speaking minority against the encroachments of the French-speaking majority. The Executive Council is to contain 15 members; the single House of Upper Canada, 80 members.

This scheme will not be popular in either section; but as it will not be submitted to a vote of the people, there will be no obstacle to its becoming law. The majority in Lower Canada will not resist the terms of a Crown-nominated Chamber, and Upper Canada will like still less being deprived of a responsible Government, which is impossible with only one Chamber. The whole plan of confederation is being carried out with a high hand. When the present Legislature of Upper Canada is dissolved, there is no question of Confederation, and the voice of the people had not been allowed to be heard, except in the roundabout way through their representatives. In Newfoundland and New Brunswick it was different; but the Nova-Scotians will be heard only through a Legislature not elected with any reference to a question of this kind.
This playing for big stakes has its dangers; but they will be met.

What does confederation mean? What is the object? What did Lord Monck mean when he talked of laying the foundation of a new nation, ally? Is the Governor-General of British North America, and ought not to use such words lightly.
Many well-informed persons here think that confederation is intended as a means of setting up these Provinces as an independent nation; that this is the object of leading English statesmen, who look upon Canada as an unending greatness, and upon the people as a mere appendage.
The Provinces are not prepared for this. They say they are too weak to stand alone, and that, if forced into premature independence, there would be great danger of their being swallowed up by the United States. The entire population, with the exception of a few Irish Catholics, are prepared to fight with Canada, or any other entity which there is a reasonable hope of conquering; but, if the question was one of conneering the whole force of the United States, the hope of success, even with all the assistance of England, might be able to give, would be so situated that the contest would be entered on with heavy hands.

Three European Diplomats.

The three diplomats who just now excite the greatest curiosity and interest in Paris, are the Prince de Metternich, Ambassador of Austria, the Count de Goltz, Ambassador of Prussia, and the Chevalier Nigra, Ambassador of Italy. The Count de Goltz, much the eldest of the trio, is a bachelor, on the other side of sixty.
He is the ideal of what is termed the "gentleman of the old school," tall in person, scrupulously neat in his dress, of very dignified bearing, and with the polished manner of one who has passed his life in the sphere of courts.

The Prince de Metternich, son of the Metternich, is now about thirty-three years of age, and belongs to the new school of diplomacy. He reminds him well during the period he filled the comparatively humble post of attaché to the Embassy of which he is now the chief, as a "young man about town," full of pleasure, and in the society of the most brilliant and gay of the Viennese, who are, after the Parisians, the most jovial people of Europe. The Prince de Metternich is still the same frank, openhearted, amiable, bon vivante, combining with the native elegance and high breeding of a grand seigneur, the organization and temperament of an athlete, playing at sight the game of the elders, and showing with equal facility a man in a military uniform. He has all the fire and energy of the Viennese,

Texas Farms, June 12, 1866.

Col. E. A. L. RURENTH, "Blair" Farm, of the 11th district, asking for information as to the results from the Texas Land Office, in relation to the purchase of this farm, it at hand, and we take great pleasure in making the following statement, based upon our own personal knowledge of the facts, and the results of the persons owning interests in the wells mentioned above and the Texas Homestead Company have had it before the public, and we have no doubt that the of these two wells one had been flowing and the other pulling nearly 150 barrels back together, but this was not the case. The water was not flowing, and the rule per day. After the explosion of the Torpedo, he commenced to flow and produced about 100 barrels per day. The water was not flowing, and the rule per day.

Second, Koyoteau well. This well pumped at a high rate of flow, and the barrels per day, decreased to about 100 barrels per day. The water was not flowing, and the rule per day.

Third, The Burnett well. Had pumped as high as 100 barrels, and had decreased to 10 barrels. The Torpedo was not flowing, and the rule per day.

Fourth, The Sherman Monocast at both pumps about 20 barrels, had decreased until the Torpedo was not flowing, and the rule per day.

Conclusion that it will now flow, as it is increasing both gas and oil.

The water in the same neighborhood has been brought up from pumping, in the aggregate about 100 barrels, to producing over 100 barrels per day, and the water is not flowing, and the rule per day.

Two more attempts. They will, to all appearances, result in a higher output.

The water has not been used, and the rule per day.

[illegible]

of two Torpedoes in the third sand-reef resulted in the production of a daily yield from fifty to eighty tons of fish. The fish are sold at a price of $1.00 per ton. The Government has recommended a trial of the Hobart's Torpedoes to all waters where seals are killing dry hogs or have caused damage to property. We consider the invention to be one of the most practical value, as evidenced by the conversion of the vessel from one of no value whatever to one worth $100,000.
